SOME GRIDIRON STARS OF GREAT FOOTBALL YEAR

One of the best tackles of the Eastern sector is Henry, of Washington and Jefferson. He is a 200 pounder, fleet of foot and a veteran, and that is a combination adapted to efficiency. Before the war he was a star, and he shines quite as brightly since the war, in which he took a hand. His playing did a lot toward capturing Syracuse, conquerors of Pittsburg. Two crack centers had it out at West Point—Greene, of the Army, who will make a name for himself this fall, and Heaphy, the capable roving Boston College pilot man. Both are aggressive and alert. Syracuse has an end of the first rank in Brown. He has held his own in every game and is a fast, accurate runner and tackler, covers, kicks in swift style and is quick in diagnosis. Garrett, the Rutgers captain and lineman, showed his versatility by going out and playing end. He is good wherever tried.
